

RE: WEYERHAEUSER, LONGVIEW

TURPENTINE RELEASE OR 1/28/97

tur-pen-tine (tur'pan tin') n. [ME turpentyne < OFr terbentine < L terebinthinus, of the turpentine tree < terebinthus: see TEREBINTH] 1 the brownish-yellow, sticky, semifluid oleoresin exuding from the terebinth 2 any of the various sticky, viscid oleoresins obtained from pines and other coniferous trees: in full gum turpentine 3 a colorless, volatile essential oil, $C_{10}H_{16}$, distilled from such oleoresins and used in paints, varnishes, etc., and in medicine: in full spirits (or oil) of turpentine — vt. -tined', -tin'ing 1 to apply turpentine to *2 to extract turpentine from (trees) —turpen-tin'ic (-tin'ik) or turwith fringes (zizit) on each corner, worn over the shoulders or head by men during morning prayer: cf. Deut. 22:12

*tall oil [half-transl. of Ger tallöl, half-transl. of Swed tallolja, lit., pine oil < tall, pine < ON tholl, young fir (< IE base tal-*, to sprout > TAILOR) + Swed olja, oil < MLowG olie < VL olium, for L oleum, oil] a resinous liquid obtained as a byproduct in the manufacture of chemical wood pulp: it is used in the manufacture of soap, varnishes, linoleum, etc.

USEPA SF

1424485